Chapter 1 by SAMUEL ARMSTRONG

Once upon a time in a kingdom far, far away There lived four brothers and knights, green, blue, red, and orange. Each with their own personal element, orange as fire, with a red hot personality. blue, as ice, with a attitude as cold as himself red, as lightning, he has quite a shocking personality, and green, as poison he has a foul and quite vulgar sense of humour. And all four of them are know as, The Castle Crashers. But this story is not about them it's about there little brother, the pink knight, his magic is almost as happy as he is. He is five years younger then all of them and always gets left behind but, not this time, his brothers are trapped by the evil wizard, his partner the necromancer, and a army of barbarians, coneheads, thieves, trolls, ninjas, fire demons, and much, much more. It all started one day, when he was at a party with the grey knights. until one grey knight came through the door, blood all over his body, told them all he saw, about the evil wizard who stole the power crystal from the king, and the castle crashers being kidnapped by hundreds of barbarians and thieves. The gray knight then died. "We need to save them" said the pink knight, "We can't there are hundreds, did you not hear me" said the gray knight captain. the pink knight then said with a smile "but i am a castle crusher too" said the pink knight. "No you're not, you're just the pink knight"."screw you" said the pink knight, he then stormed off too save The Castle Crashers
